

Pheromones and Hormones - Are they The Same?

Pheromones are often confused with hormones, although they are not the same thing. They are secretions of scent that mammals give off when they are excited, afraid or attracted to something. There are many different pheromones that people radiate, depending on the situation. You have probably heard that dogs and other animals could odor fear on a human. Humans give off when they are afraid of something that other animals with a keen sense of smell can detect.

- One emotion that causes pheromones to boost in levels is actually sexual attraction.
- This is true for both men and women.
- Other people can pick up on this scent, although they may not be sure why.
- It is a natural body reaction in which people have when they are attracted to someone else and want intimacy.
- It is not clear, yet those around will notice this scent and react.
- Pheromones for attraction often cause a strong reaction from others.

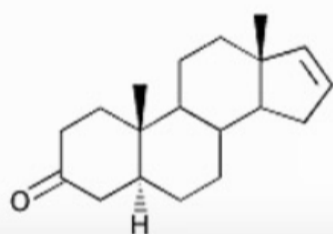

Way to Use It So that You can Attract Someone is to Use It in Colognes or Perfumes

There are many perfumes and aftershaves that use it as part of the scent. By design, scents and colognes use pheromones as a way to attract others by scent. Scents are often incorporated together with human pheromones to create a sensation. Most are used in perfumes and colognes are synthetic. There are several perfumes and fragrances, however, that use actual human pheromones to create a sensation. They have proven to work very well when it comes to getting others.

Perfumes and Colognes are Made to Attract Others as It is

We spray them on to hope that someone are going to be attracted to our own scent. The perfume scent combines with our own body and gives off a particular scent. This is the reason no perfume or cologne smells a similar on virtually any two men or women. But when you make use of pheromones in perfume or cologne, you are getting an extra advantage. You are saying that you are available and also sending out a signal to others who are also available and which may then be attracted to you.

No One Knows Exactly Why Some People are Attracted to Others

Looks are not the number one thing that attracts people to one another, though it can break the ice. Many people, at a loss for what it is that they like about someone else will cite personality, although this is not true, either.
